Hidden Dialogue

During the days I was getting ready to go to school, all I was thinking, was about those children who can't go to school, not voluntarily but obligatorily. "What can Palestinian children do when they are told not to go to school? Is there any new educational year in their country? Do they have any suitable classes? What's their teachers' nationality? Israelis or Palestinian? What would I do if I were in their place? I would resist or fail? I would study at all? ", I often thought.

All these hidden conversation annoyed me. I was put between two things: Living in a calm country, without thinking about other war-stricken students around the whole world? Or thinking about how we can defend their rights and being concerned for them?

"There are two days in the world: one is for you and one is against you.", this beautiful sentence had a great effect on me just when I was thinking on Palestinian students.

I spoke it aloud internally: "one is for me and one is against me? Is it possible for me to see such a day as Palestinians do? Don't I think that there may be a day that comes against me?"

I always put myself of instead others and have many hidden dialogues with myself, how about you?

Do you have hidden dialogues with yourselves, if any write us one of them and win a prize!!!

If it is possible for you translate the Italic Sentence into Persian and tell us whose sentence it is. We will give some prizes to the correct answers!
